

GM FOODS: A DANGEROUS EXPERIMENT

Ban GM Food in India

Say NO To Bt Brinjal

Write to the Health Minister

Did you know?

- ☞ Genetically Modified (GM) food crops might be launched in India next year.
- ☞ GM food is created by taking genes from organisms like bacteria, viruses and scorpions and forcibly inserting them into our food such as brinjal, bhindi, potato and tomato.
- ☞ When tested on rats, GM foods showed serious health problems such as inflamed lung tissue, bleeding stomachs, kidney lesions and higher death-rate among offspring.
- ☞ Decision-making on approval of GM Food is based entirely on the claims made by companies who develop it, and this has been challenged by leading scientists in India and elsewhere.
- ☞ GM crops, once introduced into the environment, result in genetic contamination which cannot be reversed. It could lead to unpredictable results like emergence of super pests and super weeds, and have adverse impact on the traditional varieties and biodiversity.
- ☞ Majority of countries do not allow GM crops and food, including most European nations.
- ☞ Many eminent scientists have spoken out against the introduction of GM foods.

In this large experiment led by profit-hungry corporations, YOU WILL BE USED AS LAB RATS
