Introduction

Thanal started out as a small group of nature enthusiasts in 1986 to bring environmental awareness in the State. The aim was to raise an environmentally conscious generation by conducting studies on natural history and bringing environmental education to schools and colleges. The rise in pesticide use and pesticide related illness, increasing deforestation, improper handling of urban waste and other alarming issues resulted in the group transforming from nature enthusiasts to serious environmental activists. This in a way helped Thanal to understand the toxic side of pesticide use which in turn changed the outlook on safe farming or the organic way of farming. This initiative through Save our Rice campaign and Promotion of Organic Farming provides consumers access to safe and nutritious food while farmers are able to conserve and cultivate traditional varieties of high quality seeds. Thanal's efforts to stop the hazardous burning of waste led to the Zerowaste Campaign. Thanal also facilitated some very useful Zerowaste initiatives, the most satisfying of this being the Zerowaste Himalayas involving two countries and six Indian states. In addition connecting Zero Waste to Zero Warming, Thanal launched Climate Change programme to build climate resilient communities through exploring solutions for sustainable living.
